At the intersection of knife and breast there is bleeding, tear and sigh where intruder meets territory there is theft and desecration where sky meets earth there is horizon and illusion and where lessons of the past encounter hopes of a different future there is a pastel-shaded present.

It is made of poetry.